BUZZY BEAVER felt himself blushing as he came out of the water. There were all the other little animals of the forest, laughing at him again.

"Haw-haw!" giggled Sammy Squirrel.
"I made a sound like old One-Eye Wolf...and did you see that sissy diva?
Even his sister's got more nerve than he's got!"

There was a splashing in the water, and Betsy Beaver, Buzzy's twin sister, emerged. Everybody in the woodland knew about Betsy, the Tomboy. She could outswim everybody for miles around...and what's more, even outfight them! Right now her eyes were flashing angrily. "You ought to be ashamed of yourselves!" she cried. "It isn't Buzzy's fault if he's timid! Why, if anything really did happen around here, you'd see that he'd be just as brave as any of you!"

"Ho-ho-ho!" roared Wilby Woodchuck, "Ha-ha!" laughed all of the other enimals. Mac Monkey collected himself first, and amid sputters of mirth, gasped, "Buzzy...brave? Don't ...you're k-killin' me!"

Cheeks burning, Buzzy made his way homeward. His mind was made up...and when Betsy entered, it was to find bim packing his little valise! "It's no use!" he said. "They were right...I'm a coward! There's no place for me here...I'm going to live on the other side of the woods!"

In vain Betsy argued, warning him of old One-Eye Wolf, who had escaped from the police and might be in those very woods! Then she, too, made decision. "I'm going to see you through the woods anyway...just to make sure nothing happens to you!"

So they set off together, and finally reached the edge of the deep, dark-forest. Looking into the depths, poor Buzzy's spirits oozed into his shoes. "S-suppose old One-Eye's really in there!" he quavered. "1...!'m afraid to go in!"

"I just said that to keep you home!"
Betsy snapped. "Sometimes I wish you could turn over a new leaf, and get some nerve! Just to show you there's nothing to be afraid of, I'm going in myself!" And she did. It was dark in the forest, with frightening shadows all around. A twig cracked behind her, and she turned... to look into the fierce, gaping jaws of
One-Eve Wolf himself!

To Buzzy, waiting nervously at the edge of the forest, came frightening sounds of battle...then "Help!" It was Betsy's voice...his dearlybeloved twin! Then something wonderful happened. Gone was poor, timid Buzzy...and in his place it was a resolute, courageous boy beaver who darted into the woods like a lion! Something hit old One-Eye like a cannonball, sending him flying. Collecting himself, the wolf reared to the attack...only to find Buzzy waiting for him, fists cleached. As Betsy watched with bulging eyes, wondering what had come over her once-timid brother, Buzzy waded in...and soon the wolf was stretched out on the turf!

What a scene when Buzzy led the captive wolf homeward! All the little animals of the woodland cheered. They called the reformed beaver "Buzzy the Bold"...and knew that he could fight like a hero for something worth fighting for!

THE CHEESE-EATERS

MULLIGAN MOUSE CRAWLED carefully out of his mousehole in Mr. Jobes' grocery atore and made his way to the cheese counter. It was very quiet in the store, since Mr. Jones had sone home. But Mulligan didn't take any chances and looked sround to see if anyone was there.

"Well, I guess they've all gone," chirped Mulligan, "and I sure am hungry! Now for some delicious cheese!"

But as Mulligan approached the cheese section he saw the mouse trap which Mr. Jones had set.

"Tee-hee!" laughed Mulligan.
"As if that silly thing could catch me!"

However, he was a shrewd little mouse and didn't take any chances. so he carefully sprang the trap, which anapped shut with a loud crack. Mulligan shivered slightly as he thought of what would happen if he ever got caught in that thing!

As soon as the trap was aprung, he lightly tripped up to the cheese counter and was astounded to see another mouse already there, munching on some cheese!

"Hello!" said the strange mouse. "Step right up and carve yourself a piece! It's delicious!"

"What are you doing here?" barked Mulligan, who was very angry. "This is my territory... and no stranger can come husting in here!"

"Oh, yeah?" barked the stranger. "First come, first served! What are you going to do about it?"

"Listen. you!" screamed Mulligan. "I found this place, and I cleared the mouse trap out of the way, and all this belongs to me!" I don't want any foreigners around here!"

"Who's a foreigner?" shouted

the stranger, and without another word he punched Mulligan right in the pose!

in the nose!
Then the fight started! Mulligan and the atranger were beating each other so hard and shouting so loud that they didn't notice Mr. Jones when he opened the grocery store!

Suddenly, a basket came down over their heads...and the two little mice realized that they were trapped!

Now Mulligan and the stranger forgot their own argument. They began to whimper.

"What'll we do?" whispered Mulligan. "We'll he killed!"

"We have to help each other," answered the stranger. "and wa must work fast! Listen...he's going into another room to get some mouse traps. Help me lift this basket!"

"B...but it's too heavy!"

said Mulligan.

"We must lift it," said the stranger. "Try hard!"

The two little mice pulled with all, their strength, and slowly the basket lifted. Higher and higher...until they suddenly darted out from under it and it fell back into 'place with a clatter. They just managed to duck into Mulligan's hole as Mr. Jones came back.

"We're saved!" said Mulligan with a sigh.

"Yep... and we wouldn't have heen caught in the first place if we hadn't been fighting each other!" answered the stranger.

"You're right!" said Mulligan, "From now on, we'll be partners! One will be on guard while the other eats. Then we won't have to worry."

"You said it!" replied the stranger, as he extended his naw.

The two little wice grinsed and shook hands.
